SECURITY INFORMATION

25X1C

28. Early Warning. The approaches to important areas are believed to be well covered by an early warning system which includes both early warning radar and ground observers.

Fighters

42. Improved versions of present jet fighters, the best of which is now the MIG-15, may be developed by mid-1953. It is considered that the Soviet Union may have already developed an all-weather jet fighter and a jet penetration fighter. Both may be introduced into service during 1952. There is a possibility that the Soviets might adapt the IL-28 and Type 35 jet light bombers for an interim all-weather interceptor role.
